Welcome to Houma

Just 55 miles from New Orleans and 85 miles to Baton Rouge, Houma is nestled in Terrebonne Parish. It offers a rich blend of history, breathtaking landscapes, a thriving economy, and something for everyone. Once a small town, Houma has transformed into a city with over 111,000 residents. It is one of the top producers in the state for crude oil, natural gas, and seafood industries. Part of a tri-parish region, the area is home to Nicholls State University which offers top ranking nursing and biology programs.

Houma is known for its mouthwatering cuisine, friendly culture, elaborate Mardi Gras celebrations, and strong sense of community. Residents and visitors come together to enjoy festivals, live music, cooking contests, and 5k races. Friday nights are spent at crawfish boils with neighbors, cheering on the local high school football team, or dining out at an intimate restaurant. At the beginning of every month, residents can browse seasonal produce at Market at the Marina, the farmer's market organized by Terrebonne General Health System. Families thrive with affordable housing, strong school systems, and children's activities.

Houma's scenic marshland continues to inspire artists, and its enchanting scenery provided the backdrop for several well-known films, most recently Where the Crawdads Sing and Emancipation.

Get the full experience of South Louisiana, by exploring nearby New Orleans, Lafayette, and Baton Rouge, which is rich in their own cultures and is home to world-known festivals such as Jazz Fest, French Quarter Fest as well as pristine golf courses, parks, zoos, aquariums, and Michelin Star restaurants.
